Editorial

Dear Anglicans, friends of Anglicans, and English language lovers. It is that time of the year again when the weather starts to get warm, flowers bloom, birds sing, and final deadlines of the year are near. I have been incredibly lucky to be the editor-in-chief of this year's Baccanalia, so get ready for me to tell you a whole bunch of nothing in this Editorial <3

I've been a part of Baccanalia's editorial team since 2023 (I'm on the cover of 2022, though!), and I still have no idea what to write here. I bet none of the prior editors-in-chief have answers either. I could tell you how much I recommend everyone to join Baccanalia's editorial next year, but I bet you can figure that out from the fact that I've been part of it one way or another for the past four years that it is, in fact, really fun. So I do tell you to join. Because you really should.

As much fun as it has been, everything has to come to an end, and for me, this is it. I've been incredibly lucky to have been part of Anglica for many years now. I've met my bestest friends, experienced things I wouldn't even have imagined and learned so much about myself. Some of you readers I can say I have grown up with. This community has given so much, and finally, after this, I can almost say I have given back to it the same.

I feel each Baccanalia reflects the people who've made it. Especially with this one as everyone in the editorial team had the greatest ideas and visions from the start. Of course, we do have some classics like getting to know the Board of 2026, interactive bits and words from a piltti, but your May Day is about to get much better with an introduction to Anglican pets and some ridiculous campus gossip (some true, some not true and all somewhat dramatic). You could really say there's something for everyone!

I really hope you enjoy reading this as much as we enjoyed making it,

Jenna Haaja
Editor-in chief

Words from the Chair

Happy May Day dear reader!

Another academic year has somehow passed by, and it is time to pat yourself on the back for a job well done. Before I started university, May Day never really meant anything to me but these past four years, it has become one of my favourite days of the whole year. All the fun events that our lovely May Day Committee has organised in the weeks leading up to the big day remind me of how I used to feel counting down the days to Christmas as a child. Whether this is your first student Vappu or the seventh, I hope you all feel the same excitement and the sense of togetherness that can only be felt this time of the year.

This year has been slightly different for me in terms of studies as I have been completing my teacher training, which has been really exciting. At the same time, I have had the pleasure to lead our wonderful board of Anglica, who have become so near and dear to me in this short time. Although this has been the best year of my studies so far, it has also by far been the busiest. I've understood that the point of this text is for the chair to give advice and share their wisdom, but I have very few wise thoughts left after hearing 6-7 jokes all these past months... (whether I'm referring to the kids I've been teaching or the current board of Anglica, I'll leave that up for you to decide). However, maybe I could say some kind words of encouragement.

I know that for some, instead of happiness, the springtime may bring along stress about missed deadlines, unfinished courses, and uncertainty about summer jobs (me too). The reality is, those problems will be here next week too so for this one day, try to forget about them and just celebrate all that you have achieved this past academic year, even the small things. One day we'll graduate (well, most of us) - this too shall pass. So, take this time to rest, enjoy the sun (that is hopefully shining), feast on some sima and munkit and spend some quality time with other Anglicans <3

With love,
Eveliina

What's your favorite Vappu event? May Day Sitz and Pub Quiz

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do? Probably Havu and I would send an angry message to everyone who has ever paid for their sitz party late

How well is your home fortified against a potential zombie attack? Not at all, to be honest I wouldn't even try to survive a zombie attack

What's your favorite form of potato? Any that's crispy

In your opinion, which color has the worst personality? Teal. I will not explain myself.

Jani Rautava

Position in the Board? Vice Chair

Your age in academic years? 3

What's your favorite Vappu event? Vappubooli

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do? I would swap with the Chair so I could hit the hammer on the table, real professional like

What's your biggest pet peeve? Chewing with your mouth open

What food would you gladly eat every day if nutrition wasn't really important? Tortillas

In your opinion, which color has the worst personality? Lime Green

Havu Ranta

Position in the Board? Treasurer

Your age in academic years? 5...

What's your favorite Vappu event?
Sitz!! 100%

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
Emma Pernu, I'd send something whimsical to the mailing list <3

How well is your home fortified against a potential zombie attack?
Quite well, my friends can barely find their way here

What's your favorite form of potato?
Wedges!! Truly elite

In your opinion, which color has the worst personality? orange...

Niilo Rautavirta

Position in the Board? Secretary

Your age in academic years? 2

What's your favorite Vappu event?
May Day Sitz!!

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
I'd swap roles with Emma Pernu and get access to Anglica's email list. I'd send a funny spam mail to everyone in Anglica ;)

If you got arrested, for what reason would it be? I would get into a fight with someone over they bashing on LOTR or Star Wars

How well is your home fortified against a potential zombie attack?
Quite well. I have a lightsaber, so...

In your opinion, which color has the worst personality? Neon green... I figure their personality might be a bit toxic :/

Emma Pernu

Position in the Board? Communications Coordinator aka Info

Your age in academic years? 2

What's your favorite Vappu event?
Olympics and May Day Punch

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
Havu and panic about a bunch of numbers

If you got arrested, for what reason would it be? I'm quite a legal person, so probably wouldn't get arrested

What's your biggest pet peeve?
Indecisiveness

Your age in academic years? 2

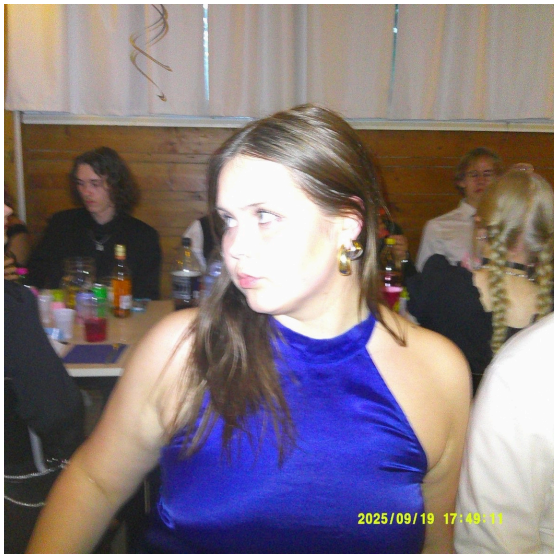

What's your favorite Vappu event?
Vappusitz or Picnic

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
Probably Havu. I'm so bad at math that I'd somehow by accident mix up the account numbers multiple times and donate some of Anglica's money to either our board members accounts, myself included too ofc, or different charities and then give everyone the freedom to decide what to do with that money muahahaa.

If you got arrested, for what reason would it be? for either switching roles with Havu for one hour and everything that followed that or having trouble deciding things: if there are more options than one, I'm struggling.

What's your biggest pet peeve?
loud chewing/eating + eating with ones mouth open... no one needs to see or hear that

What music would you choose to play every time you walk into a room?
k-pop or some movie soundtrack (e.g. tii tii tii ti ti dii ti ti dii, tii tii tii ti ti dii ti ti dii)

Emma Laaksonen

Position in the Board? Kopo

Your age in academic years? 2nd year

What's your favorite Vappu event?
Hanging by the riverside on the 30th and watching the sunset with a crispy beverage <3

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
I'd swap roles with Havu and make really cool outfits with their amazing closet!!

What's your biggest pet peeve?
the obsession that you need to be "nonchalant" (also loud chewing)

What food would you gladly eat every day if nutrition wasn't really important?
mansikkamaito (strawberries with milk)

What's your most hated mode of transportation?
a completely full Föli in July

Juuso Kujanpää

What's your favorite Vappu event?
I'm most excited for Power Hour and the May Day Sitz!

If you could swap roles with anyone in the board for one hour, who would you pick and what's the first thing you'd do?
I think I would have to go with Havu, I'm sure there's some way I could wire some money to myself without getting caught :D (for legal reasons, this is a joke)

What's your biggest pet peeve?
speling mistaks

How well is your home fortified against a potential zombie attack?
I meannn I have a cat :0

What music would you choose to play every time you walk into a room?
“Guess who's back, back again..."

Getting to Know
DERYA DURAN

1. Where are you from and how did you end up here at the university of Turku?

I am from Turkey, and during my PhD back home, I had the chance to spend half a year at the University of Helsinki as a visiting researcher. Finland somehow stuck with me after that, maybe it was the peaceful atmosphere, I don't know. It felt like a place I could see myself in. After finishing my PhD, I moved to New York City as a Fulbright postdoctoral researcher and lived there for almost a year. I loved the energy. Honestly, I was living my best life, but it wasn't exactly the most sustainable place long-term for me. Life runs at triple speed there. So, I applied for funding to come back to Finland, and I ended up first in Jyväskylä (yes, I know, a tiny shift from NYC to Jyväskylä☺). I worked there as a postdoctoral researcher for five years, and for the past one and half years I have been here as a university lecturer, teaching courses related to language teaching. And that's the journey so far!

2. What is your favourite thing about teaching at the Department of English or teaching in general?

My favorite thing about teaching here is how supportive and understanding everyone is, both staff and students. I came into teaching as "a researcher first," so I have been learning my way through the teaching side of things. And whenever I need help or I realize halfway through a lesson that "oh, maybe I should explain that differently", people here are patient.

There is something comforting in an environment where you are allowed to grow without harsh pressure. You get the space to take your time, figure things out, and improve step by step. And the best part is: nobody acts like you are supposed to have magical teaching superpowers from day one (which is great, because mine are still downloading☺). So, for me, that mix of kindness and the freedom to learn has made this a place where I feel I am growing.

3. What courses have you taught here recently? Do you have a favourite among them?

Recently I have been teaching Proseminar, Academic Writing and Speaking, and Second Language Research Methods. Do I have a favorite? Honestly, it changes every year. It really depends on the group - some groups come in with such good energy that even if I start a course thinking, "Hmm, this one might be a long semester," the class somehow turns it around. When the students make you feel like you belong there and you start seeing real connection in the room, everything shifts. For me, it really depends on the group. My "favorite course" basically ends up being whichever class shows up with good energy that year! But in general, each course has something I enjoy, and the class dynamics keep things fresh.

4. Have you been involved in any research lately? Would you like to share something about it?

Yes, I have been working on some research lately! I am a conversation analyst, which basically means I spend a lot of time zooming in on tiny details of talk, pausing videos at awkward moments, and convincing people that "yes, this half-second pause does matter."☺ Right now, I am working on a solo paper about how tutees problematize tutors' advice in ESL tutoring sessions. And the more I study it, the more I realize that receiving advice is never as straightforward as we pretend. We nod, we smile, we say "okay", and then sometimes we gently resist it, negotiate it, or try to steer the conversation somewhere else. (We have all done it even when the advice is good!) My paper looks at exactly how that happens in tutoring interactions and what it might tell us about how we make use of advice in institutional settings. I am excited to see how the paper turns out, because these small conversational moves can actually reveal a lot about how guidance really works in practice.

5. What do you like to do in your free time?

Before moving to Turku, I used to take dance classes, and they always left me feeling energized and proud of myself for remembering at least half the steps. In my free time, I really enjoy long walks with my loved ones, especially by the Aura river. It is the perfect mix of company and calm, which is ideal for someone like me who treasures quiet moments.

And whenever I have a little extra time, I try to learn some Finnish. Emphasis on try☺. Finnish is a beautiful language, but it keeps giving me gentle reminders that "no, you have not mastered this yet."

6. What's one piece of advice you would like to give our students?

One piece of advice I would give our students is this: I really appreciate how hardworking Finnish students are and how seriously you take your studies. That's a great foundation. And as a teacher, I also really value connection in the classroom. You want to feel that you are there for a purpose and that people are actually present with you, not just physically, but mentally too.

So, my advice would be try to be a bit more proactive and engaged. I know the famous Finnish humility can sometimes make you hold back, but putting yourself out there really does make a difference. And I don't mean overnight, these things take time. Start small. You can speak up a little more, interact with others, including people from different backgrounds. You will be surprised how much you learn and how much richer the experience becomes. And if you get the chance, travel and see the world. It opens your mind in ways you don't expect, and it also makes returning to Finland's calm feel even nicer!

Nothing lasts for evermore is a famous phrase I've heard countless times throughout my life. My university journey didn't start like it did with the other freshers. My journey started in a folk high school at Jyväskylä where I did my Basic Studies of English and Swedish courses with friends who went to different universities around Finland. However, that's a story for another time.

This year was full of surprises that came from around different corners and twists. First I thought that "yeah, I might not fit in here" and "I'm not cut out for this lifestyle". But now, after experiencing how different university life actually is compared to my folk high school year, I understood that I AM cut out for this and that I DO FIT in here amongst everyone else. I pushed the negative feelings out of my system, welcomed the new positive ones instead.

My Piltti year has been quite the roller coaster of emotions and happenings (literally and figuratively) which isn't necessarily a bad thing. These experiences from the past year have given me a chance to grow as a student and as a human being. And the fact that I've experienced everything with new people who have become great friends to me is a very joyful feeling.

Even though Turku wasn't my first choice for a student city and for the university, I don't regret my decision to choose it as a place to stay for my university years and maybe later years after graduating too. Turku is a very beautiful place to be despite the colder winds and rainy days during Autumn, and slush and sleet in spring. Turku has a lot of beautiful places and I hope to show them to my family, and especially to the new students who come to the university in autumn. Two very good examples that come to my mind are the Botanic Garden of University of Turku where I went when Anglica made an excursion in the form of an event called Anglica Touches Grass, and cat café Mirri for all the cat lovers.

Now, the experiences of other freshers who I kindly asked to share their experiences!

"My freshman year has been full of uncertainty and gratitude. The future is exciting, but I believe that I will get good preparation for it from the university."
-Anonymous

"My first year has been filled with heartfelt moments, caring companions and a re-emerging vigor for life. I can not imagine a path I would rather choose than this one<3."
-Anonymous

“Freshman year has truly been amazing and eventful so far! At first, I was a little afraid of what studying and living here would be like, but the welcoming environment and all the wonderful people I have met made me realize that there was absolutely no need to be afraid and that I wouldn't be alone while studying here. I look forward to what the future has in store for us!”
-Anonymous

I know that my Piltti year is coming to an end this Spring (2026), so me and the other freshers can transfer the title of Piltti to the new freshers in the Autumn.

How to Approach an Internship IN 5 WAYS

There comes a time in every anglicans life where they will have to start thinking about life beyond studies. It can be a challenging but also a rewarding journey. Ultimately life of a Turku University English student can take on many forms, and in this article, you will find the path of few. I set to find out answers to five questions:

1. What internship/internships have you worked?
2. How did you find about the position? And how did you apply?
3. What was the application process like?
4. How was your experience? Did you find it useful? OR How are you liking your experience? Does the internship seem useful?
5. What tips do you have for someone searching for an internship position?

1. I have done an unpaid project internship and a more traditional working life internship. The project internship was a social media internship (@kieliaturussa) for the School of Languages and Translation Studies at the University in fall 2024. Then in summer 2025, I worked as a communications intern at the City of Turku. In addition, for the past academic year I've been doing the teacher training year at Norssi!

2. Social media internship: I saw the open internship position in an email that I think was sent to all language students. The application process was pretty simple, I just sent an email with my CV and a short motivation letter attached.

City of Turku: I was actively looking for an internship / a summer job, and the internships at the City of Turku came up during my search. I ended up applying to several different internship positions at the city through Kuntarekry.

3. Social media internship: Very straightforward: I applied by sending an email and then got an email saying I'd been accepted. That was it.
City of Turku: Applied through the Kuntarekry system, got an invitation to an interview, did the interview remotely on Teams, and then received a phone call letting me know I got the position.

4. Social media internship: A good experience! Since it wasn't full-time work, it didn't affect my studies too much. The work was very independent, and I had a lot of freedom in deciding what I want to post and when. It was definitely a valuable experience, and I'm pretty sure it helped me land the paid internship the following summer!

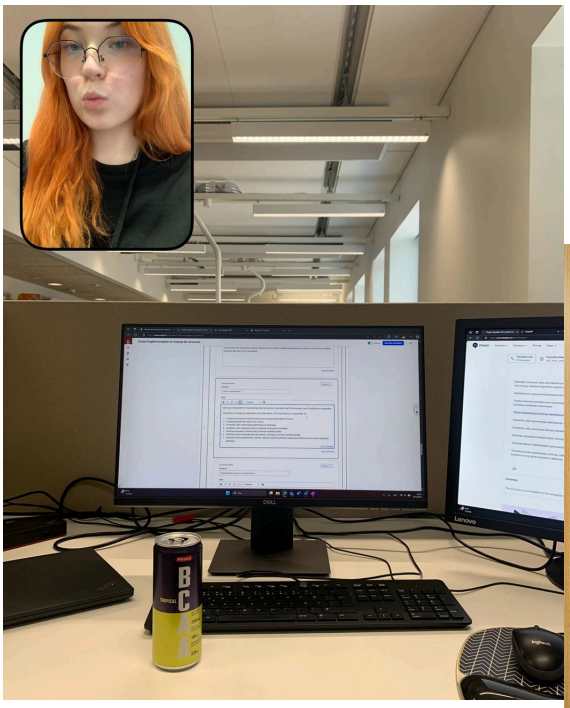

City of Turku: Just a really great summer overall. I got to dive into the everyday work of the communications unit in a really hands-on way. I wasn't just stuck at the office, as I had the chance to explore some really interesting places in Turku! I'd definitely recommend the position to anyone interested in communications/marketing.

5. Apply, apply, apply! I know it feels frustrating and exhausting, but you have to put in the work. For example, between December 2024 and March 2025, I applied to over 60 positions. Also, remember to prepare for interviews! It makes a big difference and makes you feel more confident.
If you can, apply to unpaid internships as well. Unpaid and lower-paid roles build experience, and they can help you land a paid internship. From my own experience I think it's worth it, even though it requires a lot of initiative and unpaid work.

As you probably know, the job market is super tough right now. So, if you don't get an internship right away, don't be too hard on yourself. Good luck to everyone applying! Don't give up, your time will come <3

-Lotta

1. I haven't done a "proper" internship but a few smaller ones. At the moment, I'm one of the content creators for @kieliaturussa Instagram account and then I've also been a support student for On my mind/Mielen Päällä which is a peer support activity within the university. On top of this I've also been a student assistant for a couple of academic conferences held at the university.

2. I think most of the things I've found in my inbox. So, reading your emails is sometimes definitely worth it! After seeing the announcement, I've applied by filling out a form or sending a motivation letter.

3. For most of the things I haven't been interviewed, just accepted based on my application/motivation letter, but for On my mind the new possible support students are interviewed by the coordinator Heidi and a study psychologist.

4. I think all the experiences I've had have been useful in different ways, but especially maintaining a social media account has given me competency that I think I'll be able to use in my future career.

5. Keep your eyes open! For example, Opiskelijan uutisposti, the weekly newsletter, always has a section for internships and open vacancies.

-Marika

1. I'm currently working as a communications and marketing intern at the City of Hämeenlinna.

2. I found the position through JobTeaser. I sent my CV and application letter to the recruiter via email as they requested in the posting.

3. The application process was pretty straightforward. I got invited to an interview a couple of weeks after I sent in my application, and I was told I got the job a week after the interview.

4. I'm really liking the experience so far! Most of my tasks revolve around the city's website renewal project, so I've got to learn a lot about digital communications and marketing. Overall, the internship has been a great start for my career.

5. Get familiar with the university's Career Services! They offer free career courses that can definitely help you stand out from other candidates quite often. For example, I've got a project management certificate through them.

-Pinja

1. I was the intern for Werner Söderström Oy's Digital Productions team during the summer of 2025. The Digital Productions team is responsible for the production and distribution of all audiobooks and eBooks for WSOY and all other publishing houses running under WSOY.

2. I found the position through a friend! She linked me to WSOY's own site where the position, among with other summer intern positions was open for application. I applied through their own sites to all positions available, only curating my application letter to each department.

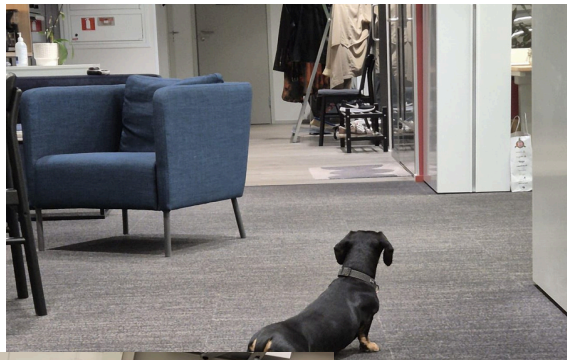

3. Stressful in its own way like all application processes. After sending my application I waited for an answer and was half expecting a "Thanks but no thanks" until one day out of the blue I was invited to an interview. The invite was on very, very short notice, as in I had the interview next day of the invitation. Of course, I went and had an interview with the Senior Producer as well as the team member responsible for the intern for the summer. The interview was rather basic, they asked me what I knew of WSOY, my thoughts on audiobooks and eBooks, what I studied and how my studies could support me. They also had great care in making sure I was certain I would be able and willing to travel to and from Helsinki almost on an almost daily basis.
After I believe a week or so they contacted me again and asked for a Teams meeting. I was so insanely nervous I barely slept the night before the meeting. At that meeting they thanked me and asked me once more if I was absolutely sure I would manage and after some persuasion (and a promise to look after myself) they offered me the position!

4. I had so much fun. I adored the job and really fell in love with it. At the last meeting I even said that if I had the opportunity, I would love to work the position again. In the end I didn't even have to wait much longer after my internship as not even 3 months later they offered me a substitutes position that I am currently working!

5. Do not be afraid to send an application to ANY position. Like seriously. Get cocky. No, seriously. Look at the job description and think to yourself: "I could do that" and write your application with that in mind. Blind confidence is better than no confidence. Unless they demand that you must have studies in like neuroscience or rocket science or whatnot and you have not studied that one bit then you should be fine. Just send the application!

Be open to working in other cities as well. Yes it sucked to travel but would I do it again? Yes.

-Hanna

As per myself, the ”internship” I have done is that of the subject teacher training at Turun Normaalikoulu! And to answer the five questions simply:

1. I am currently finishing my teacher trainee year, which will give me the qualifications to be a subject teacher in English as well as in my minor studies of psychology.

2. Teacher training is advertised by the university, and I applied through their systems which included a “motivational letter” and an interview.

3. The application process was a simple application & interview, but you must also have a grade minimum of 3 on the spoken language course pronunciation active test.

4. The experience has been great. Notably this training is needed to have the full qualifications to teach, but on top of that it has been an interesting year. Being in the ”real life working environment” differs a lot from reading about it from books, so I do feel like all work experience is beneficial.

5. Well, I do not have much experience applying for internships, but I encourage everyone to apply everywhere they wish, and I wish you all luck in that quest!

-Sending tsembs, Emmi<3

49. Oodi anglicalaisuudelle
(Pikku-Matin auto) Lyrics: Kasperi Kaukonen

1. Q-talolla laulu raikaa suurel voimalla
Johtopöytää vituttaa, on paljon melua äänentoisto takkuilee ja pöydät paskana
ja se on sitsien eestä se!

2. Arcanumii ennen saatiin muual hengata
Juslenia räjähti ja Siggel hometta silti pitää meidän jossain paikas treffata ja se on Kaffilan eestä se!

3. Muita ärsyttää kun finglishiä puhutaan paskat käännökset ja kielioppi unholaan
Meikkaa se ei senssiä mut antaa mennä vaan ja se on pääaineen syytä se!

4. Turussa on anglikaanin hyvä asua on tääl Dynkky, Lygas elkä muita baar
Kolme juna-asemaa ja paskoi busse ja Föli myöhässä on taas!

Sitz Reviews

Kasperi Kaukonen REVEALS ALL!

I love sitz parties.
They are hands down my favorite kind of event and have been since my Fresher's Sitz in 2022. Something about a bunch of people coming together, singing, eating and making a ruckus just tingles my brain. The strict and sometimes unknown archaic rules just make the experience more fun (read: ratting people out for their bad behaviour is fun).

I think that we can all agree that Anglica has an extremely well maintained, cherished and GOOD sitz culture. Everytime I attend an Anglican sitz after experiencing a sitz organised by someone else, it feels like coming home.

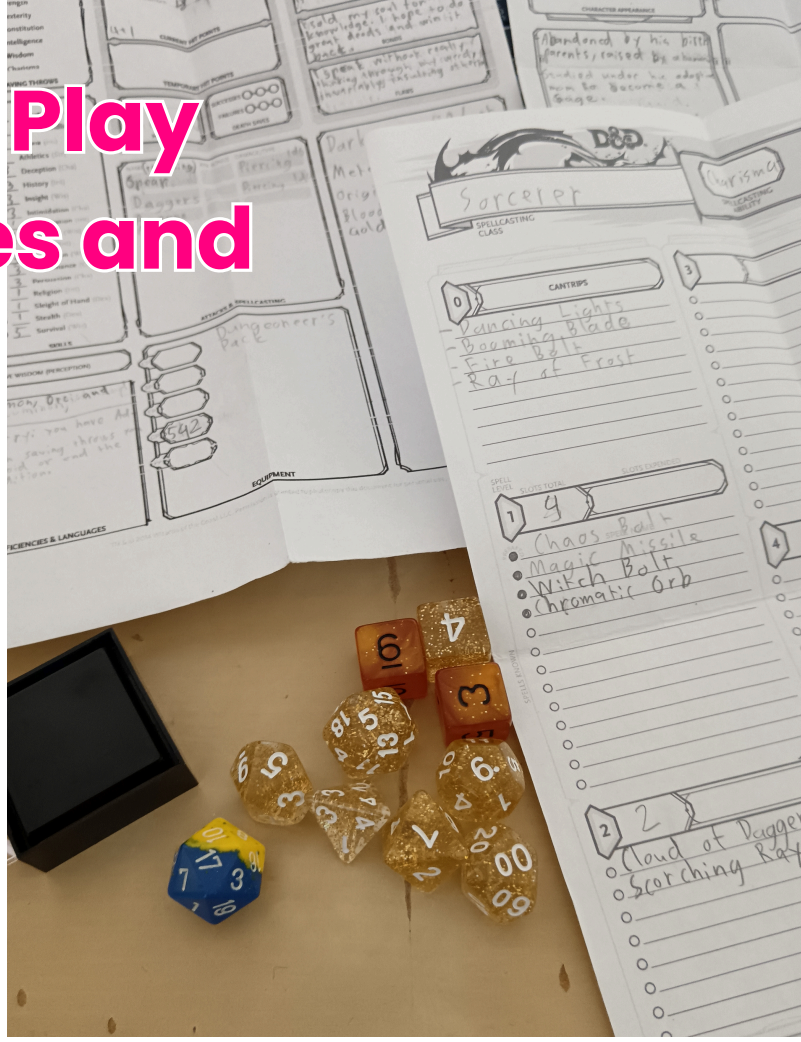

In this article I will be ranking all of the sitz parties I have attended during this study year on a scale of 1 to 10. Let's begin!

Any Sitz Party Organized by Anglica: 10/10

Nerdica: Come Play Tabletop Games and HAVE FUN!

In the Autumn of 2025, around the start of September: the board game club Nerdica was created from the magical power of roleplaying.

Nerdica is a low threshold club for all to join, with or without any experience in the roleplaying world. The founding members at the time were a small group of freshers and older students; all who are members of Anglica or have the membership of Anglica. The creation and formation of Nerdica came from a simple burning passion for roleplaying and different games, from tabletop games to card games.

So up until now, Nerdica has been active every week. In the Autumn Semester, every Wednesday we played the ever-so-famous Dungeons & Dragons: 5th edition, and so far during the Spring Semester, Vampire: The Masquerade has been an ongoing game that we are playing.

Words of magical wisdom from the chair of Nerdica, Miikka Koivula, in the form of a questionnaire.

Why was Nerdica established?
"I wanted to bring people who enjoy this hobby together and give a chance for new players to try them out as well."

How committed do you have to be?
"The beauty of RPGs is that you can choose to be as committed as you want. Especially with how we run things: you don't have to be there every week and just show up when you feel like it. Though as a GM you do have to commit to prep and showing up for your sessions."

Do you just play roleplaying games? Or do you have card games too?
"We usually play card games when we don't have enough players to do RPGs and when I remember to suggest such a thing. The players are also free to suggest other games if there's something they wanna try."

In short, Nerdica has a low commitment threshold unless you're the DM (Dungeon Master) but all in all we just have fun, joke around during the sessions, and just have a good time immersing into the fantasy, or sci-fi and other genres of roleplaying in a good company.

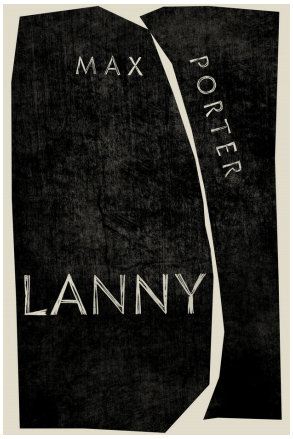

So bring your dice, maybe a snack and a drink, and then grab your party of other eager explorers, mages, bounty hunters, and whatnot to join us on fun, entertaining adventures! We here at Nerdica are eagerly waiting for new adventures to begin with you!

What to Read This Summer

Hanna Aro

Summer is fast approaching, and as you are hopefully reading this on a (fingers crossed sunny) May Day picnic, I thought it timely to give you a couple recommendations for some interesting books to read or listen to. The following recommendations are all titles that I have read myself, followed by a small recommendation for which format and where you should read it, but also some recommendations for snacks and drinks to accompany you!

Lanny
by Max Porter

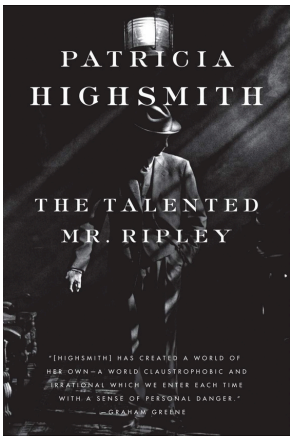

A strange but beloved child goes missing from the village he lives in. The mysterious and ancient figure Dead Papa Toothwort is awake, listening in on the sounds of the village.

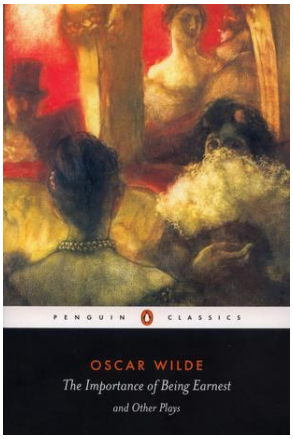

HOW: Audiobook
WHERE: In a forest next to a bubbling stream or spring
SNACK: Nuts and seedcake or spice cake

The Talented Mr. Ripley
by Patricia Highsmith

A man yearns to escape his past and ends up impersonating another man. His obsession with playing the role turns sour… and very deadly.

HOW: Print
WHERE: By the lake on a dock, at dusk
SNACK: Sparkling wine to start, ending with gin

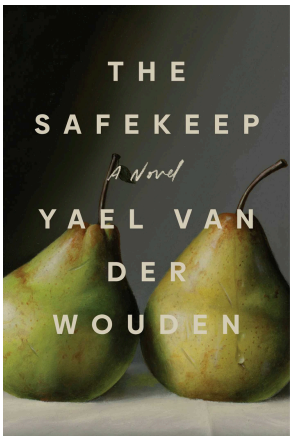

The Importance of Being Earnest
by Oscar Wilde

A glorious comedy of two men pretending to be a man named Ernest. Chaos ensues.

HOW: Read aloud among friends
WHERE: In a garden or at a picnic
SNACK: Strawberries and cream

The Safekeep
by Yael van der Wouden

Eva lives in her family's home, comforted by her routines, until her brother suddenly brings his girlfriend Isabel to live in the house with her for the summer. Isabel disturbs Eva's routine and, by consequence, her heart.

HOW: Print
WHERE: In the shade of a fruit tree
SNACK: Pears and biscuits

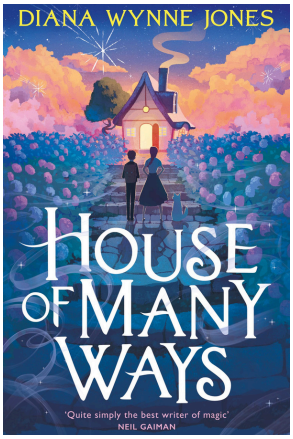

A Psalm for the Wild Built
By Becky Chambers

A monk wanders the lands offering remedies to people's worries. Their travels are upended by a lone robot, who cannot rest until the question of "What do people need?" is answered.

HOW: Audiobook
WHERE: On a walk out in nature
SNACK: Tea and freshly baked goods

The House of Many Ways
by Diane Wynne Jones
(And the whole Howl's Moving Castle trilogy)

Charmain Baker is looking after his Great Uncle's cottage but runs into problems as none of the doors lead to where you'd expect. Luckily the house does speak and will tell Charmain where to go.

HOW: Audiobook (for a roadtrip) or print (on the train)
WHERE: On your way to a summer cottage or on a roadtrip
SNACK: Any sparkling beverage and sweets

THIS IS BASKETBALL!!

A Recap of Anglica Armadillos' 2nd Season

As a wise friend of mine once said: "This is basketball". It was once again time for the Dillos to lace up their kicks and compete for glory! This was their second entry into the Campus Sport basketball tournament! The tournament consisted of a three-game group stage and possible playoffs. Here is a review of this season as well as a recap of all of the games.

Group Stage Game 1: Armadillos (58) vs STKU (27)

For us the tournament started on a cold monday morning in January. We arrived at Iskeri Sports Hall early as we had over an hour of warm-up time. According to our sources one of the players took the warm-up so seriously that they recreated the same exact routine they had while playing in High School! We knew nothing of our opponent and the excitement was rising through the roof. We had one small problem though. We only had six players which meant that we would have little to no breaks during the game.

As the game started we got into an early lead and the game was "over" before it truly began. Our fastest players kept running up and down the court making superb fast-break plays, our center gathered rebounds like prime Shaquille O'Neal and our thee-pointers were falling nicely.

But tragedy struck as at the beginning of the 2nd half one of our players suffered an ankle injury. This meant that we had to play the rest of the game with no substitute players. Fortunately this injury didn't disrupt the flow of our game and we kept our large lead until the end.

All in all, a fun first win and a very good game from everyone!

Group Stage Game 2: Armadillos (26) vs Henrik Street Athletics (48)

Game two was against an opponent that beat us BAD last year. By like 50 points if I recall correctly... anywhoo our morale was high and we definitely had a chip on our shoulder from last year. The opponent's team consisted mainly of people who had played in the Finnish junior championship levels in High School (or even in the higher adult leagues) so we knew we were in for a tough game.

The pace and physicality of the game rose tremendously compared to game one but we managed to keep up with HSA for over half of the game, even leading at one point! The physicality got to us unfortunately as one of our players suffered a "season" ending injury after being elbowed by the opposing team's player >:(

In the end, their wider roster proved to be the winning factor as they won the game by 20+ points. Nevertheless, we put up a good fight and it was a very good showing from the whole team.

Group Stage Game 3: Armadillos (43) vs P-Klubi (34)

Entering the game the playoff picture had been starting to form as some teams has already clinched their place. For us however, it was a win or go home situation. Win and we advance to the 8-team playoffs from spot no. 5, lose and either get eliminated from the tournament or (by the luck of the basketball gods and Campus Sport organisers) enter the playoffs at spot no. 8. This being said we were extremely confident that we would win the last game.

TL;DR:, this game turned out to be one of the most thrilling games I have ever played in. We were optimistic about our chances, but as the game started we found that we were a tad bit… too optimistic as P-Klubi took control of the game immediately. They commanded the game and even led by over 10 points during the second half. Our shots weren't falling at all and we were getting desperate.

With 2 minutes to go in the second half we were down by 9 and the realisation hit that we might actually not make the playoffs at all. But then something magical happened. Our team came together collectively and everything clicked. We defended well for a few possessions and got a couple of steals, which led to easy buckets on the other end. And somehow with seconds to go, it was a 2 point game. We had the last shot. To our horror, the final attempt to tie the game clanked off the rim.

But we were all saved by the last-ditch effort of Forssa's very own Jussi Mattila as he managed to grab the rebound and sent the game to overtime! The referee thought that the basket didn't go in so they were already gathering their things when we started wondering about the overtime.

After Jussi ignited a fighting spirit in all of us, the rest of the game was smooth sailing till the end, and we clinched our spot in the playoffs!

Playoffs: Armadillos (39) vs T-Klubi (43)
We were now in the same spot as last year, the first round of the playoffs. We were ready to fight for a place in the next round. But luck wasn't on our side. As I headed into the "arena" for the game I got text messages telling me that many of our players had fallen ill the night before the game. We had exactly 5 healthy players, just enough to play.

We knew we were in for a ride. We fought, played well, defended like hell, and during the half-time break I could do nothing but lay on my back and try to gather myself for the final half. The game was neck and neck, with T-Klubi having the lead for most of the game. We were a few baskets away from tying the game but their guards made a few very tough shots to keep them in front. In the end we came just a bit short. and we were knocked out of the playoffs in the first round.

SUMMARY
This was once again a super fun tournament, and I feel like it is important to have these "just for fun" kind of sporting events! I hope we will have a team again next year.

Kiitos faneille!

Introducing Anglican Pets

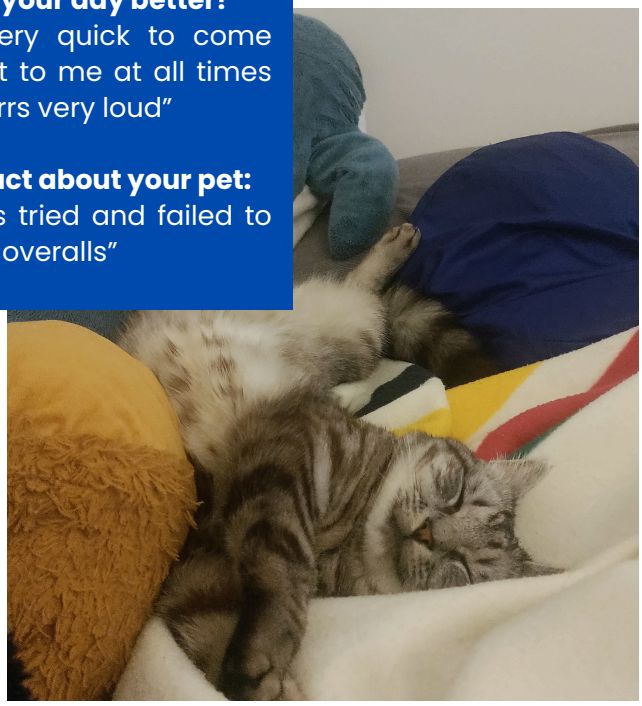

Lotta Viitala

The pets of Anglica bring comfort and chaos into their owners' everyday lives. In this article, we're shining a spotlight on these beloved sidekicks, who make coming home better, no matter what your day has been like.

Alvin, 4 years old

What's something your pet does that instantly makes your day better?
"He's very quick to come lay next to me at all times and purrs very loud"

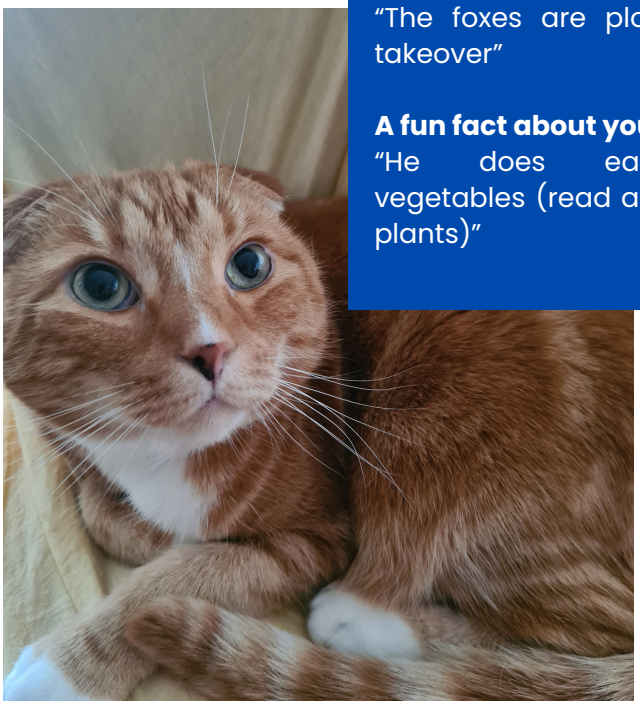

A fun fact about your pet:
"He has tried and failed to eat my overalls"

Topi, 7 years old

What conspiracy theory would your pet believe in?
"The foxes are plotting a takeover"

A fun fact about your pet:
"He does eat his vegetables (read as house plants)"

Maisa, 3 years old

What's the weirdest thing your pet does?
"Eats plastic and licks toes"

What fictional character has the same energy as your pet?
"Yzma from Emperor's new groove"

Tonks, 8 years old

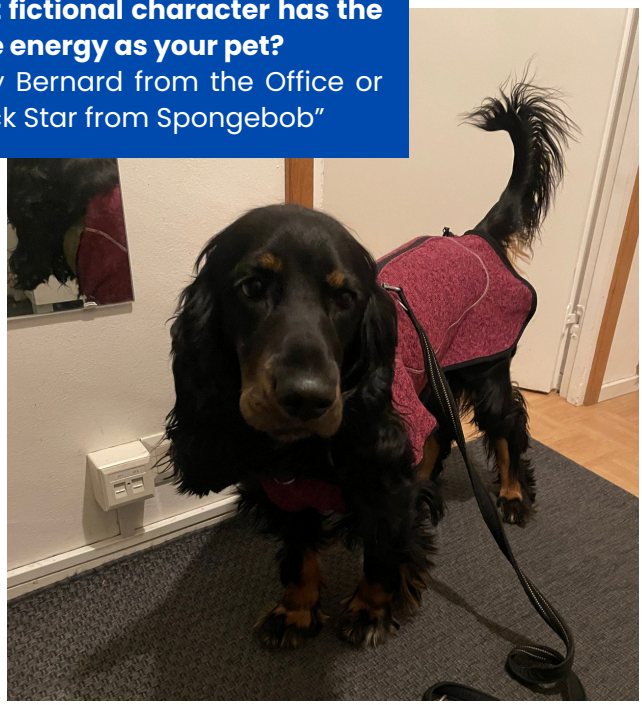

What household rule does your pet completely ignore?
"The chapstick on my lips is mine"

If your pet could talk, what would they complain about?
"Not enough food, too much exercise, taxes and inflation"

Unto, 2 years old

What would be your pet's major at university?
"He would apply to med school to sniff and pee on patients, but needless to say, he would not get accepted"

What fictional character has the same energy as your pet?
"Andy Bernard from the Office or Patrick Star from Spongebob"

Nelli, 3 years old & Ronnie, 5 years old

What would be your pets' major at university?
"For Nelli, probably something humanities related. For Ronnie probably economics, or biology."

A fun fact about your pets:
"Both were rescued from the same area in Cyprus but one year apart!"

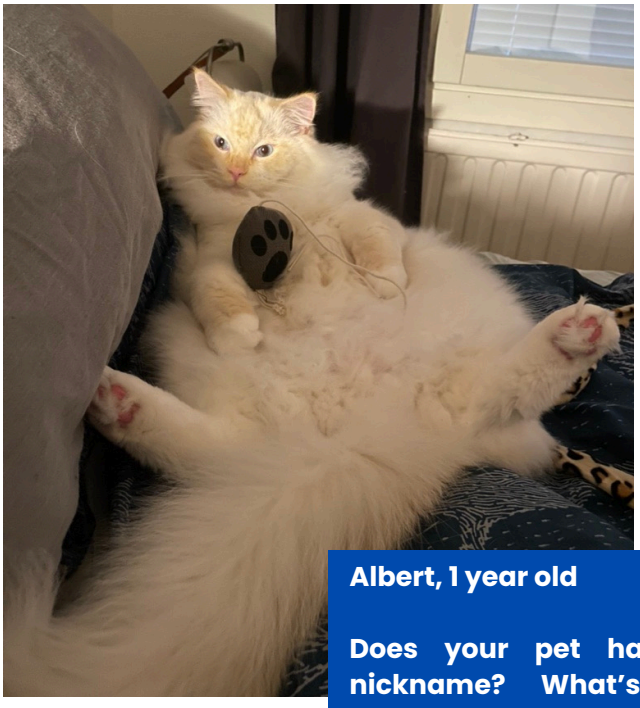

Velmu, 4 years old

What's the weirdest thing your pet does?
"He's so used to me opening doors for him he walks head first into one if I'm not quick enough"

If your pet could talk, what would they complain about?
"He does complain, about everything, all the time, without volume control. I don't say hello to neighbours, I apologise to them"

Albert, 1 year old

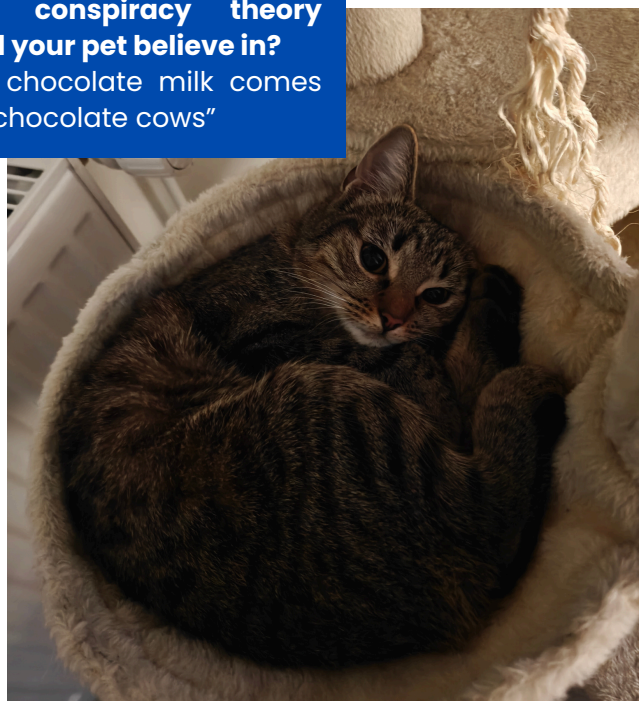

Does your pet have a nickname? What's the story behind it?
"Albi, the devil (because that's what he is behind his fluffy disguise), Pertti"

A fun fact about your pet:
"His favourite hiding place for toys is shoes and the water bowl"

Mimosa, 1 year old

Does your pet have a nickname? What's the story behind it?
"Mau mau - she is so talkative so I've just started calling her mau mau back"

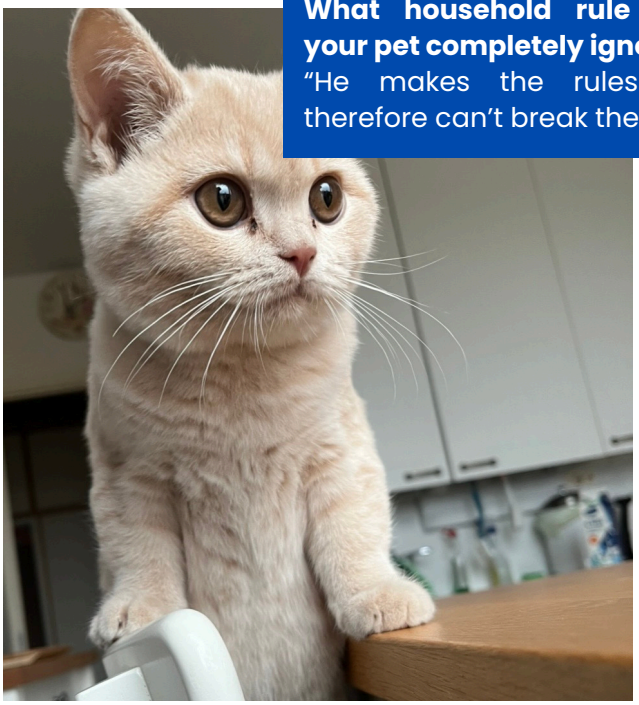

What conspiracy theory would your pet believe in?
"That chocolate milk comes from chocolate cows"

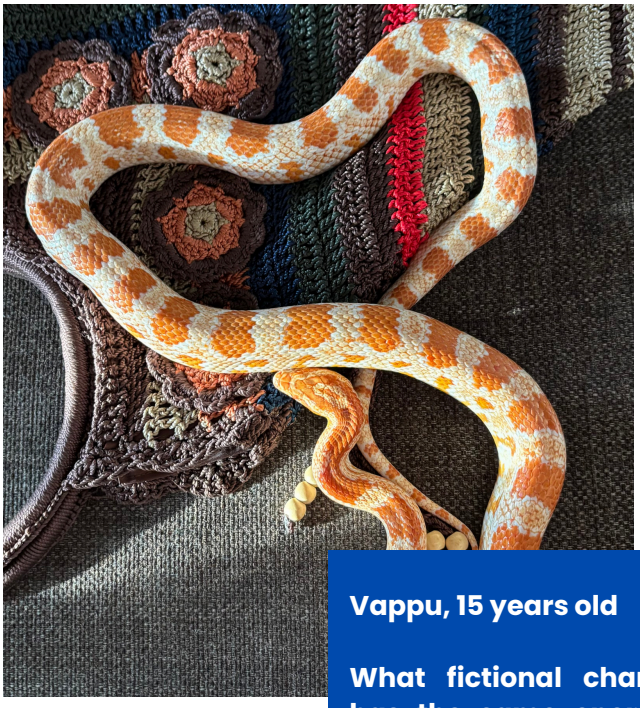

Pulla, 9 months old

What's something your pet does that instantly makes your day better?
"When he climbs on my lap on the couch or helps me throw dice in yatzy and win"

What household rule does your pet completely ignore?
"He makes the rules and therefore can't break them"

Kiisseli, 7 years old

What's the weirdest thing your pet does?
"When you are sleeping he will kindly order you to put the blankets aside so he can cuddle with you"

What would be your pet's major at university?
"Art. He comes running when someone is drawing or painting and lays down either on your lap, on the paper or directly on the paint. He can paint as well"

Vappu, 15 years old

What fictional character has the same energy as your pet?
"Luna Lovegood"

What conspiracy theory would your pet believe in?
"That the government controls the weather (to her it's kind of true)"

Mauri, 1 year old

What's the weirdest thing your pet does?
"He needs a shopping haul every time we come from the grocery store. He sniffs every item one at a time while we unload them"

What household rule does your pet completely ignore?
"No begging... He would steal food straight from my mouth if he had a chance"

Martta, 10 years old

Does your pet have a nickname? What's the story behind it?
"Yes, too many to list. All of them weird variations of her name spontaneously invented in the moment"

A fun fact about your pet:
"Her favourite rare treats are mozzarella cheese and vegan marshmallows"

Dylan, 11 years old

What would be your pet's major at university?
"Botany. Dylan loves flowers no matter whether they are dead or alive"

If your pet could talk, what would they complain about?
"He would complain about not having enough treats and that we do not spend all day outside with him. He would also probably complain how his siamese siblings do not respect his personal space"

Ziggy, 1 year old

What's something your pet does that instantly makes your day better?
"Simply exists"

A fun fact about your pet:
"Ziggy loves to play fetch with hair ties"

Bowie, 5 years old

Does your pet have a nickname? What's the story behind it?
"Bo and Bowie Boy"

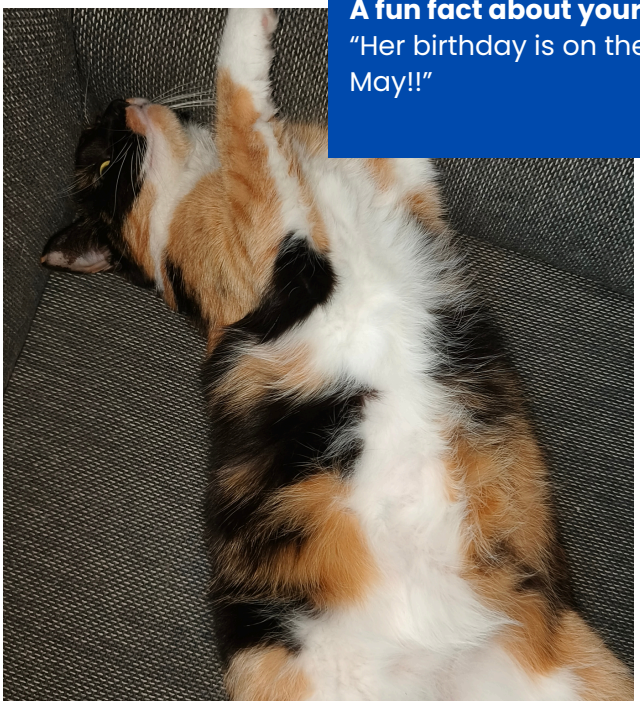

What conspiracy theory would your pet believe in?
"Lizard people: Bowie is convinced he can catch the lizard people by just sitting and staring at every guest"

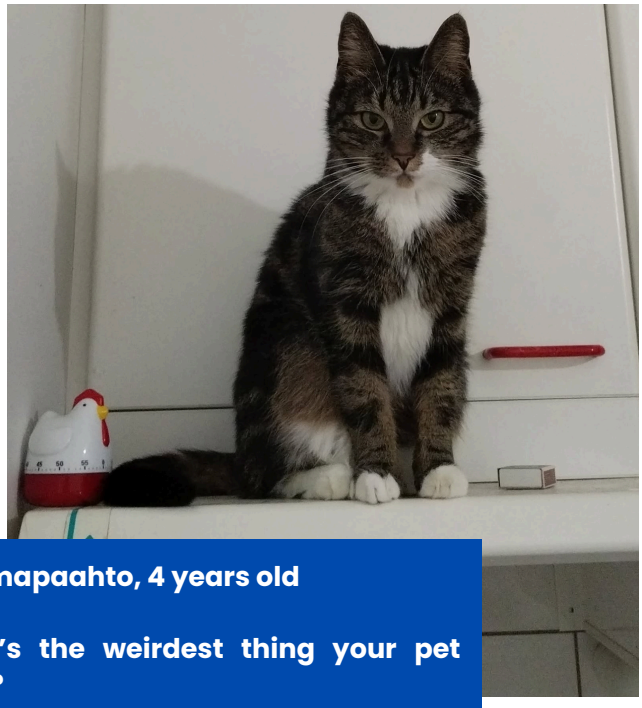

Nuppu, 7 years old

If your pet could talk, what would they complain about?
"Not getting enough treats, or me making her sit for treats"

A fun fact about your pet:
"Her birthday is on the 1st of May!!"

Tummapaahto, 4 years old

What's the weirdest thing your pet does?
"Peeing in the sink, trying to bite running water, chilling in plastic bags"

What household rule does your pet completely ignore?
"Chair stealing is frowned upon (every time I get up even for a few seconds she's instantly there looking like she hasn't moved for hours)"

Pikkuinen, 5 years old

What's something your pet does that instantly makes your day better?
"Standing on hind legs and reaching her front paws up towards me wanting to be picked up"

A fun fact about your pet:
"She's the mother of Tummapaahto!"

The Drama NOBODY ASKED FOR

(Leaked by a totally reliable source)

"Rumour has it Anglica's weekly coffee hours are not actually for only drinking coffee, but for naming all the countries in the world. It does also seem that the coffee hour doesn't even last an hour, but TWO hours."

"Visitors of Assarin Ullakko swear that the staff can sense when you've taken half a scoop too much sauce and will stare directly into your soul until you reconsider your life choices."

"Arcanum's group study rooms are allegedly booked out until the year 2084 by the same three students who "just like to be prepared.""

"Someone claims they saw a student with a moustache enter the library at 8am and emerge at 11pm with the same expression and the same half-finished cup of coffee."

"Turkulainen humanistispeksi allegedly performs spontaneous scenes in Macciavelli, but only when no one is looking at them."

"A wild rumor is circulating that if you attend three events as a piltti, you will be applying for at least three roles in the board for the following year."

"The campus fox is said to have a better attendance record than most students."

"A student allegedly tried to take three pieces of bread instead of two and was immediately approached by a shadowy figure who whispered, "we saw that.""

"A spreading rumour claims that the library printers are sentient and choose who they will and will not serve. They reportedly dislike kylterit."

"We've heard that the lock of the door of Arcanum's student space stops working only when someone with a crush on you is nearby. It's basically a matchmaking device."

"A rumor says the Anglica Armadillos practice their accuracy by throwing bouncy balls at unsuspecting students during exam season."

"The local transportation is said to operate on "vibes, not schedules." It works exactly when no one needs it."

"A trusted source claims that if you say "I'll catch up on readings this weekend" three times in a mirror, Janne Skaffari appears and laughs at you."

A Year of New Music

Niklas Rouhiainen

I love to get music recommended to me by friends as well as strangers so whether we are already friends or still strangers I'd like to share with all of you something new to listen to. This year I've decided to highlight these five albums that have been made by mostly non-male performers and have been released in the past year.

Acopia – Blush Response

This Australian dream pop group appeared on my radar a few years ago. Continuing their great run with this short album released in the autumn of 2025, Acopia takes us in to more guitar led instrumentals while still delivering the great soothing vocals they have given to us in the past. On the track "Falling" the band strays a bit from this albums common thread. The track features a looping drum break and nearly falls into dance music, yet it still manages to sound like it is their song.

Top 3: Falter, Falling, Real Life

Ledbyher – The Elephant

This fresh combination of UK drill, hyperpop and rnb blew me away on first listen. Ledbyher manages to create a unique sound on an album mostly produced herself. On the mellower tracks like CIGARETTES her vocals really get to shine. With some easily recognizable samples, at least for a rap music listener, the instrumentals have a feel to them that at the same time is classic but also fresh.

Top 3: MIDDLE OF THE ELEPHANT, CIGARETTES, BIG WISH

Art School Girlfriend – Lean In

The instrumentals on this album are some of the best pop instrumentals I've heard in a while. The album sails from the more danceable songs like "L.Y.A.T.T." to the more chilled ones like the following "The Field" in a way that seems so easy that you start to wonder why anyone would try to construct an album in any other way. The lyrics are full of longing and together with the instrumentals they create an album that feels whole unlike anything else. The albums highlight for me is the song "The Peaks".

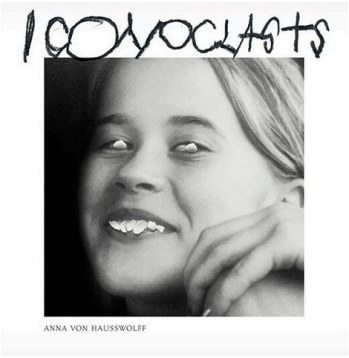

Top 3: The Peaks, The Field, Almost Transparent

Faetooth – Labyrinthine

Faetooth call their music “fairy doom” and it really characterizes their sound well. Their instrumentals are quite clearly doom metal and the lyrics take you into a dark but magical world consumed by rot. The vocals start off quite clear but they quickly get darker and are a mix of these clear parts and almost growl-like sounds. As someone who listens to metal music a bit more occasionally Faetooth feels like a great way to delve into one of its many subgenres.

Top 3: Death of Day, October, White Noise

Anna von Hausswolff – ICONOCLASTS

Anna von Hausswolff has been releasing music for over fifteen years and I am sad to say that this album was the first time I heard of her. It is hard to pin down a specific genre that this album would fall into since it flows so seamlessly through so many of them. Von Hausswolffs vocals are some of the most impressive I’ve ever heard and if I had to compare them to someone, the legendary Kate Bush is the only one who should even be mentioned in the same conversation. It is no surprise that some of the songs have almost a religious feel to them since they were originally written to be performed with a church organ. Boasting an impressive list of features from some all time favorites of mine like Iggy Pop and Ethel Cain this sure felt like a religious experience to me.

Top 3: Struggle with the beast, Aging Young Women, Unconditional Love

How to not DIE when going out!

Or Student Event Essentials

As I'm nearing the end of my fifth year as a student, I would consider myself somewhat of an expert when it comes to student event attire. Therefore, here is the ultimate list of must-haves on any great night out!

Number 1 - Overalls

Unless you love larping as a non-student, overalls are absolutely essential for any student. They shield your clothes from mud, drinks and other mysterious substances, they can provide warmth in the late evenings, and you can fit just about anything in the pockets! And with how much money you've probably spent on patches, it's good to show them off before this garment becomes completely obsolete in a few years...

Number 2 - Your best worst shoes

Student events are the perfect place to get your shoes messed up (shout out to my – formerly – white sneakers). You will also most likely be on your feet the entire time, either dancing, walking to every single bar in Turku or taking a "good shortcut" home. It is therefore essential to wear a pair of shoes that are both extremely comfortable to walk in and that you don't mind getting dirty. My current party shoes are eight years old, the most comfortable pair I own and absolutely disgusting – so perfect for student events!

Number 3 - Your id

One might argue that you should always have a form of id on you – just in case. And that probably is true, but I think I'd forget my head if it wasn't attached to me. Despite this I always make sure I have it on me, in the zipper pocket of my overalls, when I head out to a student event. You don't want to line up 30 minutes to get into Lygas only to be denied entry due to your missing documents. Always keep this in mind when heading out the door: phone? keys? id? check!

Number 4 - Tote bag

Although you can store a lot in the pockets of your overalls, it's helpful to have a tote bag to carry bigger items. Any tote bag will do, but if you happen to have the Anglica tote (the ones with the longer strap, not the other ones), that would be your best choice! All the rest of the items on this list can go into your tote bag. Also, you can leave it at the cloakroom when heading into a club, and therefore do not need to finish all your drinks before entering. Just make sure the bag makes it home with you at the end of the night.

Number 5 - Anglica sweatshirt

When dressing for a student event, my outfits nearly always follow this formula: leggings, short-sleeve top, overalls, party shoes and a weather-appropriate jacket. In addition, I always bring an Anglica sweatshirt with me in my tote bag (see number 4). It is easy to throw on when it gets chilly during a checkpoint run, you can take it off when heading into a bar, and it's a lifesaver when walking home at 4 A.M.. Technically you can wear any sweatshirt, but it's scientifically proven you look 100% cooler when repping our dear Anglica (Ranta 2026, 46).

Number 6 - Water bottle

If you want to get the most out of your night, it is essential that you remember to hydrate! Often you end up walking, dancing and singing a lot, which can leave you quite dehydrated. And that's without adding alcohol to the mix. As student events often cost money, you don't want to be forced to leave early due to a fainting spell or ending the night hunched over the toilet. Please remember to take care of yourself!

Fun fact! I use an old liquor bottle with 'water' written on it as a water bottle. I find it quite humorous, but if you ever see me chugging straight from the bottle – it's just water!

Number 7 - Flask

Staying on theme with liquids, I always bring a flask with me to student events. Your flask can contain whatever drink you want it to; it absolutely does not have to be alcohol! A flask fits perfectly in the pocket of your overalls, and unlike a can, you can close it if needed. You can also decorate it – mine has Kuromi on it! Also, remember to clean your flask after you come home. You do not want to find it a few months later with a mysterious liquid inside…

Number 8 - Sunglasses

Need a way to look instantly cooler at the club? Just wear sunglasses! Preferably sleek black ones, but whatever pair you currently own will do just fine. Sunglasses really are a lifesaver for student events. Is the sun too bright during an outdoor event? Need to hide your tears from others during Auld Lang Syne? Feeling overwhelmed at the club by the bright lights? Are your eyes closing on the dancefloor at 3 A.M. but want to still look awake? Throw on your sunglasses and problem solved! I have never regretted bringing sunglasses with me, but I have many a time regretted not doing so.

Number 9 - Gloves and a scarf

If there is one piece of advice you take from this list, let it be this. Always bring a pair of gloves and a scarf with you. Even if you think that it's too warm outside for them when leaving the house. Truth is, we live in Finland, and nine out of ten times it will be cold when you're heading back home. You will enjoy your time outside – whether it be the entire event or just the walk home – much more if you're not freezing your ass off. And as a cherry on top, you can then flex on your peers when they complain about being cold. If they were as cool and genius as you are, and brought gloves and a scarf, they wouldn't be cold.

Number 10 - Enthusiasm

Last but not least, maybe the most important thing of them all – a good mindset. I think that what makes an event good is yourself and the people around you. Some of the best days and nights of my life have been in spite of rain, storms, bad organization and lack of attendance from other people. An event is often as good as you make it, as cliche as it sounds. And because of that, if you don't feel like going, you don't have to. If you feel like leaving early, you can. This might be obvious to some, but many people (me included) suffer greatly from FOMO. But, I have learned, if you aren't somewhere you don't even really want to be, you're not missing anything. A student event is only fun if you actually enjoy being there! And when you do, you will make memories to last a lifetime.

… If you have any memories come morning, that is.

Quiz: Answers

Mostly A answers: Sam Winchester

Like Sam, you are very empathetic and intelligent, incredibly loyal and probably considered as the voice of reason in your group. You are thoughtful and have a very strong moral compass that guides you. Similar to him, you are a master when it comes to doing research, you question things and look at problems from multiple perspectives rather than rushing in. While you might get teased for being too sensitive, like Sam you have a big heart and strong willpower: all characteristics that make you a very skilled hunter. You are a core member of Team Free Will that fights for what is right.

Mostly B answers: Dean Winchester

You are Dean Winchester: A sarcastic, deeply loyal and funny charmer. Like Dean, you are very bold and you get things done. You might have the tendency to sometimes mask your deep emotions with your amazing charisma and humor and you might do things before thinking them through but you are a very dependable and caring person. You are a natural born leader with a lot of heart. Your genius would shine in a form of tactical combat and you would do anything to keep those close to you safe from the terrible monsters you hunt. Team Free Will could not survive without you.

Mostly C answers: Castiel

You are destined to be Castiel. Like him, you are quiet and observant and might even be a little awkward, in a very cute and naive way. You too possess a deep sense of loyalty and a strong moral compass and when you have a mission, you stay focused. You have a pure heart and a curious soul and while you might sometimes appear a little stoic and too straightforward, you are very empathetic and want what is best for everyone, to which some might say that you are an angel. You are a true dreamer and a defender of humanity and a very important member of Team Free Will.

Mostly D answers: Bobby Singer

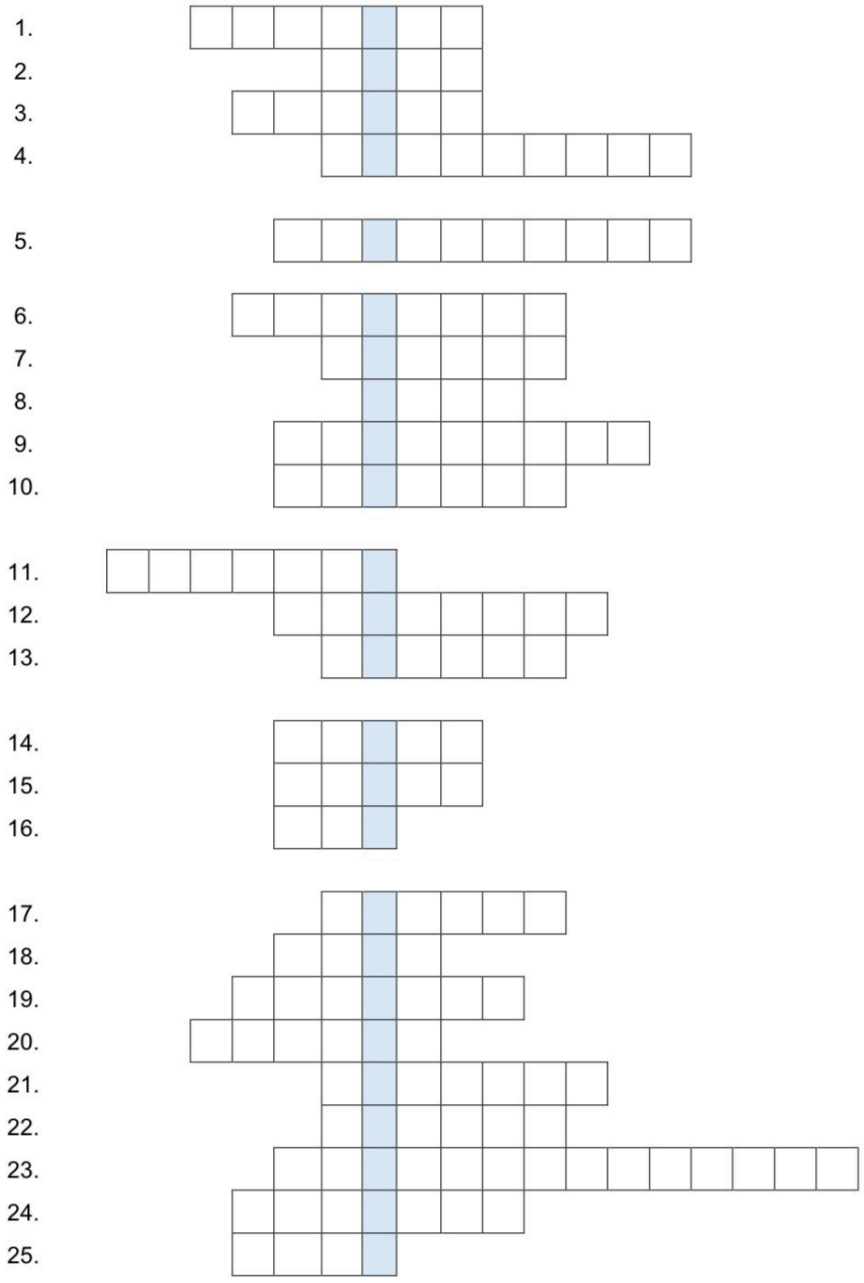

You are the great honorary member of Team Free Will, Bobby Singer. Like this fierce protector, you are a very smart individual who has an immense amount of knowledge in a variety of subjects. You probably have a book collection that would even put some libraries to shame. Like Bobby here, you can solve any problem and are probably considered the parent figure of your group. While you are very sarcastic and sometimes a little rough on the edges, you have the warmest heart and give the warmest hugs that could cure any illness. You are a great hunter with your brain as your greatest weapon.
